

John A. Kinneman, professor of Sociology at Normal University. He defined the religious liberal and gave many ways of testing our convictions. Clarity and a quiet humor won for him followers and there were many questions asked at the end of his main discourse Saturday evening. He and his wife were interested spectators Saturday afternoon during our business meeting and meeting for worship Sunday. They participated in the adult class at Sunday School.

Ann Willis the Evanston Meeting Secretary was present and explained some of the things the Evanston meeting is doing.

Charles Beals said he learned a good deal by sitting thru our business session.

We learned of the prolonged illness of Elwood Brooks which is still preventing a return to his superintendency of the Salem, Ind. schools.

Our sympathy too was called out for Harold Flitcraft who is suffering from a back injury and is hospitalized. Will Bumgarner wasn't able to be out.

Out of meeting we learned that Harold Flitcraft is unwilling to accept the treasurership of our quarterly meeting. Clement has kept the books as for the last 25 years.

The Quaker Lane neighborhood regrets to contemplate the withdrawal of the Glover family. Their tenancy is expiring with the present coop year.

There are four Glover children in the Sunday School. With all the Sunday School attracts a large and lively group of children.

The week end was a bit chilly. Dry roads made travel easy. The food was abundant and each picked up what pleased his palate Sunday noon in the meeting house.
